There will be scarcely any amendment in committee, as McKay and his committee were consulted throughout. It will likely be got through the House under the previous question. # The Oregon Question and a Commercial Treaty. It appears by various statements from Washington, that the Oregon difficulty is likely to be adjusted through the medium of a Commercial Treaty. We 22. Since the passage of the act of March 3d, 1845, a new description of hid has been received. It specifies no mode of conveyance, but engages to earry the mail with certainty; celerity, and security, using the terms of the law. These hids are called, from the manner in which they are designated on the books of the department, "star bids." It has been decided, after mature consideration, that a bid proposing a specific mode of conveyance of as high a grade as two-horse coach transportation is to be preferred to the star hid. The experience of the department enables it to lay erable territory" to the British, they will be disposed the "beneficent tariff" of 1842. Apparently the 23. When the mails are of such size as to render it necessary or expedient in reference to them alone to provide two-horse coach conveyance, the specific bid, though the highest, will be preferred to the star bid, to the extent of a moderate difference in the compensation, in case the difference is not such as to interfere with the policy of the new law, which looks to a reduction in the cost of transportation. Exceptions, however, may be allowed, where the star bid is made by the present owner of the stock on the route, and it is manifest that the reasons for preferring the specific bid do not exist in his case.

Apparently the most authentic statement of the present state of the question is thus given by the Washington correspondent of the New York Telegraph:

"After various conferences between Mr. Pakenham and Mr. Buchanan an understanding has at length been effected, for a satisfactory and pacific adjustment of the Conversion of the New York Telegraph:

Owing to the little time that intervened between the receipt of the President's message in England, the re-instategeneral feature of the contemplated policy was transmitted, Times of one of the American propositions, which have what they cost to the community, been declined by the British Government. From the communications made to Mr. Pakerham, he assumed to regard the article alluded to as semi-official and this has een the basis of the conferences at the instance of the British Minister. .

The suggestion was favorably received by the President, under certain qualifications, but was not officially considered, as it was not presented in that aspect. These consullations, however, have done more to bring about a measure of conciliation than all the correspondence and negotiaions that have transpired between the two governments.
